

MVS Course Alignment Document

ELA 10A American Literature MMC

Note: These alignment references are not entirely inclusive, but rather are typical or representative. Many of the content expectations appear in all units and in multiple assignments.

English 10A is structured in three units, each focused on a big idea. The second unit includes the novel Of Mice and Men. With the exceptions of Of Mice and Men, one other novel selected by the student, a web site evaluation activity, and research, reading selections for the course are found in the e-text. To supplement the readings, the e-text offers opportunities for the student to make connections with art, read historical background pieces, increase grammar skills, and study vocabulary associated with reading selections. Students interact with each other and their teacher on facilitated discussion forums. They communicate with their instructor through their assignments on Blackboard, the discussion forums, and the MVU message system. As many of the content expectations are addressed several times throughout the course, the resources column on this page does not list each instance by title. Clicking on the "Course Resources" tab at the bottom of the page will take the reader to the Course Resources page, which lists the materials used in the course.

Standard 1 WRITING, SPEAKING, AND REPRESENTING

1.1 Understand and practice writing as a recursive process.
